

the majesty of nature

the mystery of man excitingly explored in...

Natural History

unique magazine of science

A PANDA PERFORMS IN PEKING

[illegible]

Photograph
by Mary Silver

The Threshing Sledge

An ancient Turkish grain-separating method still proves efficient

Laotians and as located at small village at foot of the foothills of Yunnan Mountains. And with that, speaks the

How a Bird Tells

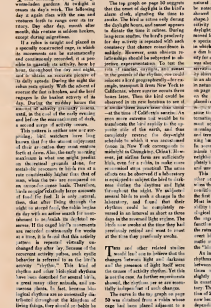

Robin studies deal with "biological clocks"

the Time of Day

THE infinitesimal takes shape early each morning in songs through windows and gardens. At twilight it comes to day's work. The infinitesimal is recognized as a fundamental property of life itself.

day it again flies with the sun and ventures back to roost over its tree again, signaling the time to awake. The bird is active only during dawn (and dusk, I should suppose.)

POTTERY OF BARCELOS

[illegible]

NATURAL HISTORY fills its pages with a breadth and depth of adventure into natural science that no other source can approach. The domains of anthropologist, archeologist, astronomer, botanist, geologist, oceanographer, paleontologist and zoologist open to you as a privileged guest.

Regular departments include • Sky Reporter and Sky Map • Photography and Microscopy columns • Travel Far and Near
• Washington Newsletter—legislation and natural resources
• Book Reviews—a judicious guide to current reading

Special features round out the picture for a full measure of nature's bounty every month (except in summer when we double up June/July and August/September issues). The authors are as talented with words as they are with telescope, microscope, and other tools of their investigations. Creatively illustrated, NATURAL HISTORY is lavish with photographs, drawings, maps, diagrams, and charts.

Expect the unexpected from NATURAL HISTORY. It is a mind stretcher, a perspective shaper—meaty with facts, brimming with ideas. Sample this recent coring:

Shakespeare in the bush—the tables turned on an anthropologist who was taught the “true” and surprising meaning of Hamlet by tribal elders she was studying in Central Africa.

The primitive life of Vietnam's Montagnards—the mountain people whose ancient and independent ways are a thorn in the side of all parties to the present conflict.

Descending the face of a Bahamian coral reef bursting with life and color at every level.

Progressing up the world's longest man-made waterway—the Grand Canal of China, now virtually inaccessible to the eyes of the West.

Appreciating a tornado's 3×10^{18} ergs of devastating energy.

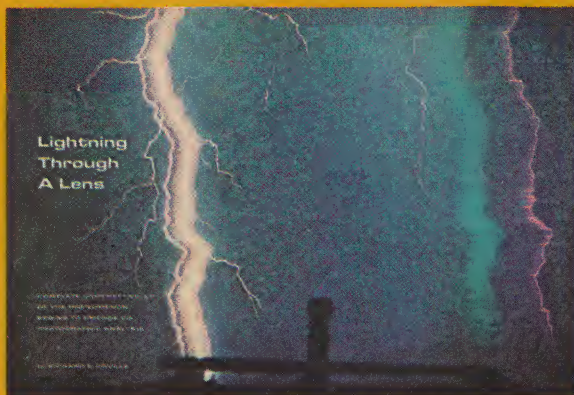

Piecing together an intimate portrait of the ancient Maya from clay figurines prised out of a square mile of mounds and mangroves off Yucatan.

Touring the Seychelles Islands before this last great ocean paradise is swallowed up by the Twentieth Century.

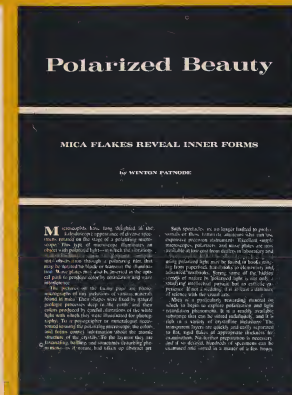

You see here just a glimpse, a brief touching at a few ports-of-call on our excursion to the boundless horizons of nature. To reserve your place on the journey, mail the enclosed application form today.

Lightning Through A Lens

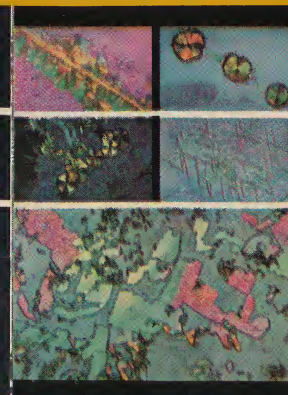

Simple stick can be utilized for astronomical measurements.

[illegible]

Polarized Beauty

MICA FLAKES REVEAL INNER FORM

by WENTON PATNODE

[illegible]

Your benefits as an Associate Member of

THE AMERICAN MUSEUM OF NATURAL HISTORY

- 1 Subscription to NATURAL HISTORY
- 2 TWO Gift Books a year
- 3 Members' Discount Privileges at Museum Shops
- 4 Annual Report
- 5 Membership Card
- 6 Members' Room Privileges

Membership Dues $7 yearly

SPECIAL DOUBLE BOOK BONUS

Yours free when you subscribe for two years, a pair of outstanding books combined in one 514-page volume with over 150 illustrations. Each of these complete books is the authoritative work of a distinguished anthropologist and a classic in its field.

INDIANS OF THE PLAINS, by Robert H. Lowie.

Beautifully organized and illustrated to present a vivid and accurate picture of Plains Indian life, it incorporates new facts, new insights in portraying the Blackfoot, Cheyenne, Pawnee, Dakota, and other tribes that gave the "Buffalo Plains" its place in the history of the American West.

INDIANS OF THE NORTHWEST COAST, by Philip Drucker.

The unique and complex aboriginal culture that flourished from northern California to Alaska's Yakutat Bay is splendidly recreated as the author describes the land, people, and prehistory of the region. Among the many aspects covered are marriage customs, religion, rituals, economy, technology, art, wars, and feuds.

This double book (retail value $3.90) was produced exclusively for our two-year Members and cannot be obtained anywhere else. Take advantage of the opportunity to acquire a unique volume at no extra cost.

